Our Needlework Guild.

"If you please, my lady, we shall require twelve jerseys and twenty-four pairs of socks this winter, and those you make last twice the time of bought ones."

It was September when this demand for my Orphanage was made, and by November the order must be executed.

"Impossible!" was on the tip of my tongue, but I changed it into "Very well."

Two things were certain; it must be done, and one pair of hands could not do it. I appealed to people to help me, and they gladly set to work. It then occurred to me for the first time that there must be scores of women in England working aimlessly, and on the other hand there were thousands of men, women and children wanting clothes. It only a little bridge could be thrown over the Island of Want, how both would benefit! I sent a paragraph to our county paper, suggesting the possibility of organizing a "Needlework Guild" to provide an object for many who had hitherto worked without one—the work to be given to hospitals, Homes in the county, and also to needy individuals—at the same time asking any who approved the plan to communicate with me. To my great surprise many of the London papers copied the paragraph, some with very encouraging approval, and letters came to me from every part of the country. Within a month our guild, the parent of all needlework guilds, was organized and at work.

The above is copied from Lady Wolterton's own report of the organization of the needlework guild. Prompted by her success in England a few young ladies of Philadelphia in the spring of 1886, organized the American branch in that city, from which offshoots have spread in every direction. Glen Ridge is the possessor of the vice-president of the parent guild in Philadelphia, who is also the president of the Glen Ridge branch.

According to form, our Guild will hold their meetings on the last Thursday in October, and the last Thursday in January for distribution of garments to charities voted for by the members.

"The beauty and simplicity of Lady Wolterton's idea, which opens to every one the possibility of helping the poor, will, I am sure, appeal to all." Will not the mothers, as a thank-offering for blessings which they have for their own little ones, add to their stock of warm clothing two more little garments for the needy ones, who are always with us?

We appeal for recruits to the guild, to the children as well as older members of the family, and as an example of what they can do, we mention the case of two little girls of twelve years, who without help need two dresses and two flannel skirts, and thus added to clothe other children not so blessed and sheltered as themselves.

New garments are solicited, as the moral effect of decent raiment is untold. A boy with a clean face and new outfit would be ashamed to do many things which he would not hesitate to do when ragged and dirty. The gift of a new garment, accompanied by true Christian kindness and sympathy, has been touched many a hard heart, and been the first incentive toward a better life.

The Needlework Guild presents a most convenient and inexpensive medium for a most useful form of charity, and we earnestly invite every one who may learn of this work to unite with us in extending its usefulness. Almost all the odds and ends of needlework may be worked up into something suitable for the needy. A short remnant of muslin or flannel will make a tiny garment for the hosts of tiny people, so really to be found.

All desiring to join the Guild, or wishing to further the work in other places, will find that the Needlework Guild is a most desirable medium for the work, and we may know how far-reaching this work may become, through our efforts. All correspondence may be addressed to:

Of Interest to Organists.

(To the Bloomfield Citizens.)

We agreed long ago to place the record organ on the list of necessities and abatements, but as it was to be tolerated for practicing on, because of the difficulty of raising the wind for the church organ. ("The blower" has always been the organist's "bogie.")

But I believe that its wheeze and squeak bid fair to become a dim memory, only to be revived at cheap summer resorts.

I was invited by the general secretary of the firm of Pelobert & Co., of this town, to visit their factory and see their thing I had never heard of before. Well, I heard it, a record organ that was not a record organ as we know it.

I sat down to an instrument that looked like a small pipe organ of two manuals and pedals, and as I pulled stop after stop, made seemingly impossible combinations on so small an instrument, and walked over the rich pedals.

"That small box could hold no such 'organ' as this," said the wonderer.

Lack of space forbids my going into details; but to those of the profession who haven't gone there before, I would say: "The good" and go there. You will find a disposition that is not disappointing and combinations of the pipe quality that will astonish you.

I write this believing that an advance has been made marking an era in the class of instruments, and that due honor should be given the brainy man who by years of patient experiment has wrought this change.

A Gentle Correction.

There is a general belief among Englishmen in American literature, that an American says he had this experience some time ago in St. John's college, Cambridge. "We were wandering about in the country, and I had been told that it was a beautiful dining hall, my eye fell on a fine portrait of Wordsworth, and I said: 'So this is Wordsworth's college.' It was: Wordsworth is dead," was the prompt though gentle correction.—San Francisco Argonaut.
